

Wilmot's Prime Ministers Path: Collective Reflections Future Directions

What We've Heard So Far

This is a high-level summary of the key themes heard at the first Prime Minister's Path community gathering – Nov 12 2024

General Sentiments

Two prominent themes emerged from the discussions:

- Concerns About Harm: Strong concerns were expressed about the harm caused to Indigenous, and other minority communities. The project must be approached carefully, fostering inclusivity, acknowledgment of history, and reconciliation.
- Support for Keeping the Path: Many residents see it as a unique educational and tourist destination with the potential to highlight Canada's history comprehensively.

Key Themes

Education and Context

- The project offers an opportunity to present a comprehensive account of Canada's history, addressing both achievements and failures.
- It can serve as a platform to educate people about the harmful impacts of colonialism on Indigenous communities and the environment.

Inclusivity and Awareness

- Indigenous voices must be centered in the decision-making process.
- Township spaces should ensure inclusivity and avoid causing harm to any community members.

Art and History

- The statues are seen as artistic expressions of history and potential tourist attractions.
- Suggestions to expand the project beyond colonial leaders were highlighted.

Ideas for the Future

Reimagining the Path

- Relocate statues to indoor spaces (e.g., museums) for better contextualization and ability for people to choose to engage with them
- Add detailed plaques or educational programs to provide a balanced perspective on Canadian history.

Healing and Reconciliation

- Create spaces, such as a healing circle garden, to encourage reflection and reconciliation.
- Integrate Indigenous narratives alongside settler histories to foster understanding and dialogue.

Financial Considerations

- Ensure transparency in funding and costs associated with maintaining the statues.
- Explore options for returning statues to the artist or repurposing them if storage is not viable.
